

Chapter 12: Visual and Other Non-Linguistic Methods

Shohel, M. & Mahruf, C. (2012) Nostalgia, transition and the school: an innovative approach of using photographic images as a visual method in educational research, International Journal of Research & Method in Education, 35(3): 269-292

This article presents research using photographic interviews in order to explore school students' transition from nonformal primary schools to formal secondary schools.

Aldridge, J. (2012) The participation of vulnerable children in photographic research, Visual Studies, 27(1):48-48

This article deals with methodological and ethical issues in utilising photographic participatory research with vulnerable children and young people.

The following two articles are useful in their consideration and debate of the uses of photovoice:

Lichty, L. (2013) Photovoice as a Pedagogical Tool in the Community Psychology Classroom, Journal of Prevention & Intervention in the Community, 41(2):89-96
